Casual Sailing

The forecast for the day was for showers that would clear in the afternoon with south-westerly winds. A heavy shower around midday sent the handful of Electron sailors home. The wind, however, was south-east and it went east and then north-east.

Seven members turn out for casual sailing. Neil Purcell had his IOM with its B rig (photo left) which kept pace with the Seawinds. He really needed his much bigger A rig in the light to moderate condition.

Spring Series and Next Week

With Auckland dropping to Level 2 restrictions on gatherings, allowing greater numbers, we will be able to get back to competitive racing.

Next week, the 27th will be the final of the Spring Series and results will be based on three days racing with no dropped days.

The following weekend will be the final of the Aggregate Match Race Series. The racing committee has already ruled that six race days will count towards the final results with one day dropped. Six have been sailed so far.

After that there is the President's Regatta.

Next Week(s):

September 27: Spring Series FINAL

October 4: Aggregate Match Racing FINAL

October 11: President's Regatta

Incident at Green-yellow.

Sailing down to Yellow-green in light winds.

61 accidentally trips 33's stern which turns him into 94.

94 is windward and has to keep clear. 33 is held, letting 15 get away to a good lead (below).
